FIELD ROOT CROPS.

If we thought it would do the least good we should urge the raising of a patch of roots for cattle, and especially just now.

From mid-winter, and especially just now, before spring opens, beets, and mangels, parsneps, potatoes, rutabagas, and mangel wurtzel are of the highest utility. After months of dry fodder, and of sheep thickened with corn meal, cattle need a change of diet, and none can be better than roots. At the same time, it is no longer a debatable question—roots are as regularly laid in as grain or grass crops. The chief difficulty at the present time, in introducing "new fangled notions," arises from the regular habits of farmers, and their settled aversion to change from old ways. Very little of this spirit exists at the West. Our very essence of life is change. Our population have broken up from old home-steads—moved off from old States—abandoned the comforts and settled life of long tilled agricultural districts—to come into a new country, where they have to practice new ways. We differently, and labor by new methods; and, in consequence, the farming community of the west are remarkably free to meet and adopt agricultural improvements. But our difficulty lies in a different direction. Our farmers have large farms—ambitious of large crops, large herds of cattle, large droves of hogs, and a style of husbandry which brings in a large yield at once; so the idea of good farming is large farming. Many a sturdy Kentuckian will very patiently plow, two or three times, fifty or a hundred acres of corn, and think nothing of it; but to put in half an acre of carrots, or beets to weed and work, to harvest and store the vexatious little crop, seems a piddling business. Our big prairie farmers, our heavy bottom-land farmers, our stock farmers, who "hog" one or two hundred acres of corn, of their own planting or of their neighbors', do not love little work.

There is a man in Marion county who lives on thirty acres of land of about a mid-dling quality. He winters seven cows, two horses, and two pigs. He raises corn for his own use, and sells none. Every year he puts in about a quarter of an acre of parsneps, or rutabagas, for winter and spring fodder. His garden in summer, and his dairy all the year round, are represented in market. He probably does not receive five dollars at once, on any one sale, through the year. We never looked into that old chest under the bed; but will venture much, that if the shrewd house-wife would keep her eagle eyes off long enough to give us a chance, it would be found that this man has made and layed up more money in the last five years, from his thirty acres, than any farmer about here from six times the amount. Our farmers have not, grown rich, and careless farming is not the cause of it.

When the dairy shall be more thorough—when wintering stock and fattening it shall be more carefully studied—we predict that our farmers will annually raise thousands of bushels of roots, and have capacious cellars under their barns to store them in.

Tobacco AND PEACH TREES.—To the latter part of spring or early part of summer, the earth from around the body of the tree to the depth of one or three inches, being particularly careful not to injure the crown of the roots, fill the cup thus formed, with treacherous clover hay, and endeavor to keep the soil of the tree to the height of three or four inches with the stem of leaves. I do not offer this as a means to renovate a diseased tree, but as a preservative—the efficacy of which has been tested for nineteen years, by Samuel Wood, one of the most approved nurserymen and extensive fruit growers in this section of the country; and also by other practical farmers, with unflinching success. Southern Planter.

STRAWBERRIES.—This fruit is marketable almost any amount last summer one hundred bushels a day were sold in the Cincinnati market. Some market gardeners have lately been catching wholy in strawberries. At one time a quart they would afford a handsome profit. We have not exaggerated the amount sold in Cincinnati. The Horticultural Society appointed a committee to investigate the amount sold and they reported that on one day, last May 23 bushels of strawberries, besides all the other fruit, were sold in the market. It is a private sale. Some one might make money at Fort Wayne, Logansport, Lafayette, Terre Haute, New Albany, Madison, Indianapolis, and at all large places, by cultivating strawberries for market.—Indiana Farmer and Gardener.

To destroy the taste of Leeks or Ramps in Butter.—We are informed by Mr. D. Rust, of this place, who has tried the experiment, that one teaspoon full of pulverized saltpetre put into three gallons of milk, will entirely destroy the taste of leeks or ramps, and it will be purified by the same process.—Lafayette Whig.

NEW DISCOVERY IN RELATION TO STONE.—It is stated in the Sheffield [Eng.] Mercury, that a scientific gentleman residing at Ipswich, Mr. Frederick Ransome, has recently discovered a new method of producing stone, and it is brought into a consistency resembling common putty, so that it can be cut and moulded into any shape, for useful and ornamental purposes, without suffering its general character and appearance, for it becomes as hard, and in some cases even harder than when subjected to the action of the weather. It can also be used as a cement, and can be brushed over the surface of wood, so as to render it fire-proof.

A WIFE NEVER THE LESS.—An examination resulting in the conviction of the individual, was recently held before William Kent, Esq., of Pawcett, of Edward Whiteside, charged with uniting a couple in marriage, knowing that he was not lawfully entitled to officiate. It appears that one Onward, had persuaded an Irish girl to marry him, and engaged Whiteside to represent himself as a clergyman and perform the ceremony. After living with the girl a few days, he told her of the trick, and heartily bade her return to her own country and people. Whiteside was held to bail for the offence in the sum of $500.

ORROR.—However, cannot exonerate himself from responsibility of committing the girl as his wife. The marriage, which was solemnized, is now a mockery, and the law of England favors that opinion, is valid, for by the Revised Statutes of Massachusetts, Ch. 75, § 24, it is provided that notwithstanding such irregularity, no marriage shall be adjudged void which has been solemnized with a full belief on the part of the persons so married, or either of them, that they have been lawfully joined together. So the biter was bit, and he rightly deserved it.

RAILROAD TO OREGON.

The National Intelligencer contains a letter on the subject of the Great American Railroad from its projector, A. Whitney, Esq., which will be found judicious. The editors of that paper are not the only parties who think favorably of that enterprise. There are several gentlemen of wealth and prudence who have expressed themselves very readily to believe in its feasibility, and who will urge upon Congress the expediency of granting to Mr. Whitney, under proper guarantees and restrictions, the facilities he requires.

"The mere vastness of the project," says the National Intelligencer, "though suggesting to many the notion of its being visionary, by no means implies, of itself, such a conclusion; and any thing but forbids therefore the prosecution of a careful examination of the possibilities of his plan. We know that many much more competent than we to judge of the scheme are already convinced of its reasonableness."

At all events the excursion promises to be a very pleasant one, and, from the known wealth and liberality of Mr. Whitney, is very inviting to all young surveyors who are fond of the adventures of a roving life.

WASHINGTON, April 23, 1845.

Blessed, Giles and Seaton: It is my intention to pass over, examine, and partially survey seven or eight hundred miles of the proposed route for the Railroad from Lake Michigan to the Pacific.

I shall leave New York about the 20th of May for Green Bay, follow the Lake down to Milwaukee, thence west to the Missouri river, and return by St. Louis.

Several young gentlemen of high respectability and education will accompany me, and it will please me to have our number increased.

The excursion will be pleasant, beneficial to health and useful in the knowledge to be gained of that vast country; and should the project of the railroad succeed, those who now accompany me can be usefully and advantageously employed in the great work.

It will please me to have some gentlemen from the South join us; and I shall be happy to communicate with any so disposed.

Truly yours,

A. WHITNEY.

41 William Street, New York.

From the Belfast Republican Journal.

WOODEN RAILWAYS.—We lately published an account of a process for the conversion of wood into a substance supposed to be fully as hard and durable as iron. The discovery possesses peculiar interest and importance for this country, where one of the greatest obstacles to the construction of railroads is the want of iron.

It is particularly worthy of notice, that the process is applicable to the construction of railroads, and that there is no iron in the rails would have to be imported from England, which could not be done at less than about $70 a ton for heavy rails, or $7000 a mile. The N. York railroads (about 600 miles in extent) cost $30,700 a mile; the E. S. P. Railroad, about $23,000 a mile. By the following it will be noticed that the cost of preparing the wooden rails in England is about $400 a mile. Placing the whole cost at $2,000 a mile, the saving between the two kinds of rails would be from Belfast to Quebec, a distance of 227 miles, about $1,000,000; or from this place to the line, a distance of 133 miles, $665,000.

The following simple statement of the process, we find extracted into the last report of the Commissioner of Patents:

"A good deal is said, lately, about wood; and a patent has been taken in England for converting it into iron—I should rather say stone by means of iron. This material (or rather fossilized) wood has been used in constructing the terminus of the Dover railway, and it really seems to have both the properties of stone and iron. Rails of it laid down at Vauxhall, for experiment, endured a travel equal to that of a year on the most grooved railway, without any perceptible wear; not even the saw marks of the timber being removed. It is supposed that timber thus prepared will not be subject to rot or decay of any kind."

"This will be tested. If it proves true, the invention will be of immense importance to the United States, where timber is so plentiful, and iron scarce, than in England. The process of preparing timber, is simply this: The pieces after having been split by the carpenter and joined for their places, are introduced into an immense iron cylinder, which is then exhausted by an air pump.

A solution of the sulphate of iron is then injected, which immediately enters into the exhausted pores of the wood. The wood is then withdrawn, and placed again in a similar vacuum, in a solution of nitrate of lime, which coming into contact with the sulphate of iron within the wood, decomposes it, and forms an insoluble sulphate of lime, or gypsum, within the wood; and the muriate of iron, the other new compound, goes about its business. So the wood becomes thoroughly impregnated with stone as hard as rock, and yet as tough as the original timber. The expense of preparing 2000 sleepers, enough for a mile of railway, is said not to exceed $400. Some of the greatest engineers have expressed their confidence in the invention, and the process is employed on many of the government works. What an invention for our Mississippi valley! Railways built of light porous wood—the more porous the better, probably—may, for less than one thousand dollars per mile, be converted into roads nearly, if not quite, as durable as iron."

BATHER BITING.—The French officer who gave the following, least recently at Washington, was quite saucy upon "the grand Lullaby" published in the National Intelligencer. I shall give you one sentiment. It is this: "Américal de grand lette republicque valant just begin to devil-up itself."

DURABILITY OF TIMBER IN A WET STATE.

Of the durability of timber in a wet state, the piles of the bridge built by the Emperor Trajan, across the Danube, is one example. One of these piles was taken up, and found to be petrified to the depth of three quarters of an inch; but the rest of the wood was little different from its ordinary state, though it had been driven more than sixteen centuries.

The piles under the London Bridge have been driven about 600 years, and from Mr. Bunn's observations in 1746, it does not appear that these were materially decayed. In 1819 they were sufficiently sound to support the massive superstructure. They are chiefly of Elm.

In digging away the foundation of old Savoy Palace, London, which was built 650 years ago, the whole of the piles, consisting of oak, elm, beech and chestnut, were found in a state of perfect soundness, as also was the planking which covered the pile heads.

Money Digging.—The Hampden Post tells a funny story about the jailer at Springfield, who was persuaded, by a negro in prison, to take him to Westfield, where the negro had concealed a large amount of treasure. They went in the night, dug in two or three places of course to no effect, and at length came to a place where the negro measured off a given distance from a certain tree, and striking his spade into the ground exclaimed in a tone of triumph, "Here it is. I ain't mistaken this time, no how. Now take off hand-cuff, Boss Day, and I'll show you something worth looking at." The hand-cuffs were removed, but alas! instead of feasting his eyes on sparkling gems and treasures, Mr. Deputy Day found himself lying upon his back and surveying the stars. When he regained his feet, there was the spade, there the hand-cuff, and there too stood Deputy Day, but the prisoner had fled, leaving his old hat as security for his return. The deputy returned to Springfield a wiser man.

MEXICO.—The New Orleans Bee of the 21st has the following additional intelligence from Mexico.

Moxy's Warehouse—nothing by the way, very strange for a warehouse. We are in immediate want of cash to buy paper, pay wages, and defray other expenses of carrying on our paper. For ourselves of course we neither ask nor expect anything; but the paper cannot be published without some outlay, those indebted will confer a favor by paying it. This is a general invitation, intended for those who owe for advertising and job printing, as well as delinquent subscribers. We have several hundred dollars due from the former class of customers, most of which has been standing for years, and all of which ought to be paid up. We are not fond of running, nor of employing those civil gentlemen who call on negligent debtors with a friendly greeting, but if our friends are disposed to forget us entirely, we shall have to adopt some course to remind them that we are not yet quite starved to death.

MEMBERS Baltimore Journal.

MEMBERS of the Alumni Office, No. 3 Nassau street, New York City. The first year of the Baltimore Journal's "Company" is now about to expire, and we call ourselves to the attention of our friends to say that it has received a support commensurate with the intense activity of the world, and that its continued publication is therefore assured. It is our intention to ship the paper to the subscribers who will make the difference between their respective neighborhoods, and give currency to the unmet needs of the world.

In order to put this work within the reach of the people, we have determined to reduce the price of our dollar and a half magazine, and will publish it for the next year at the price of thirty cents and one-half cent. And in order to disseminate this most useful and interesting work, we have decided to reduce the subscription price to one dollar and five cents, the advance price who may order five copies the advance price by agents, and to extend to them also

New York, or not more than five per cent. at, will compound five annual copies. The time is weekly, Sundays eight pages, and all in the quarto form, with neat type and paper. It is sincerely necessary to state the low price at which we offer the work, and to adhere to the Cash system with deviation whatever.

As throughout the country inserting this notice four times a week, and sending a containing it to the Albany office, will be to a free copy for one year.
